

July 14th 2015

To: United State of American United States Senator: Rand Paul,

I hope you get on the right side of the Iranian Agreement detailed today, July 14th 2015, by the President of the United States of America, Barack Hussein Obama. This is a deal the American people want. We the American people do not want a war with Iran or any other nation that does not pose a direct threat to us. We watch our finest young men and woman, through the eyes of the American Warrior Project, come back from war, torn apart, both physically and emotionally. We, and especially our children, have no need to tolerate this. We, the people, built a self-sufficient nation with the means and the resources that allows us the freedom of managing our own survival. Basically it is us, with the grace of God that allows us the privilege, of minding our damn business. It is not the American people that have put more than 75 organizations on our terrorist list; it is our elected officials, through their international dealings, that have put them there. If these faulty international relationships, outside our borders, bring us more wounded warrior projects, than these warriors' blood, broken bones, missing limbs, and shattered minds, lay squarely at the feet of our government. We are a peace loving nation that believes in freedom and that has no desire for conquests or mind changing diplomacy. Our focus should be on securing our borders, building the best defensive system in the world, and letting other nations fend for themselves.

Finally, I hope you will take to the floor in support of this Iranian Deal. It will probably not put you in favor, with your leadership but it will certainly put you in favor, with the American people.
