

Why Is North Korea Our Problem?

Pat,

South Korea, Taiwan, Saudi Arabia, Israel, Europe, Ukraine, Turkey, and if I left out a country, them too. Their problems are not our problems. Why is it that the Allies saw fit after defeating Germany and Japan, to write into their constitutions just a defensive military not a belligerent military like ours? What makes us the moral policemen of the world? Hell we never won a real war. As Jack Web, (the Millennials will have to google him) said, just the facts ma'am. Here they are: The First World War was won by the British, the French, and by the German people that got tired of it. Hard to say that the Germans lost that war since most of the battles on the Western Front, were fought in France. The US was a "Johnny come lately" on that one and had little effect on the outcome of the war. The Second World War was won by the Russians, who by June of 1944 were on the offensive with Operation Bagration. The operation resulted in the almost the complete destruction of the entire German army that was involved in the occupation of Russia and the Baltics. We forced Japan to surrender by dropping an atomic and a plutonium bomb on them. Fearing Armageddon they capitulated. The Koran war ended as a stalemate which, for all practical purposes is a cease fire that officially is still in place. I am embarrassed to mention Vietnam which was, in no other way to put it, a humiliating defeat. Sure we kicked Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait but wait, no pun intended, that was a coalition force and we did not go to war. Of course we were successful it was more like when Mussolini invaded Ethiopia sending in tanks to fight the Ethiopians that battled back riding on camels. Then came Afghanistan and Iraq without any victory. Sorry Mr. and Mrs. USA, and Senator Rubio, I frankly don't see your resume supporting the qualifications to be a World Policemen. Thank you for your offer. I will be interviewing Mr. Putin tomorrow.
