

September 20, 2014

To: Russ Lemmon

Best wishes on your new beginnings. It is not uncommon for those of relevance to second guess their decisions. The end of any game and the loss of the excitement of the competing can tend to sedate one as they enter into the next chapter of their life. It is not uncommon for one to finish on a Friday, go out with the gang for a few beers, accept a ton of accolades, and spend a tranquil weekend at home. It is that Monday morning, when you say goodbye to Laura as she heads off to do work, and you look into the mirror, an unshaven man, and you see an irrelevant person. That is the battle you will need to fight. But if you take the past, and not ponder on the good old days, but use it as lessons for the future, you will be fine. However do relive the past when you next look into that mirror, and cry out "Damn I was Good"

Your friend, your neighbor, and part time paper boy,

Bob Borelli